

A Day in the Life of Me

Un Día en la Vida de Mí

By Christine Houghton

A las seis y media me despierto para ir a la escuela.

A las siete I comer tortitas de desayuno

A las siete treinta mi mamá me impulsa a la escuela.

claims against the government. They apply to the entire nation and involve general matters such as taxation.

Along with bills, Congress considers different kinds of resolutions, or formal statements expressing lawmakers' opinions decisions. Many resolutions do not have the force of law. Joint resolutions, however, which are passed by both houses of Congress, do become laws if signed by the president. Congress uses joint resolutions to propose constitutional amendments, to designate money for a special purpose,

Presidential Signing The majority of bills passed by Congress become law after the president signs them. In 1962, President John F. Kennedy signed a bill that designated the home of abolitionist Frederick Douglass as a national monument.
Speculating Why might a president refuse to sign a bill?

From Bill to Law

.....
Main Idea To become a law, a bill must be passed in identical form by both chambers of Congress.

Civics & You As a bill is considered, both houses of Congress keep a check on it. Read to find out why the houses must agree on each law.

Every bill starts with an idea. The ideas for new bills come from private citizens, the White House, or from special-interest groups—organizations made up of people

Committee

After a bill is introduced, it is assigned to a standing committee. The committee is the subject of the bill. The committee can (1) pass the bill, (2) make changes to the bill, (3) replace the bill with a new one, (4) ignore the bill, or (5) “pigeonhole” the bill, which means to keep it out of sight. A bill can be brought back outright by the president.

Debating

En nueve diez cursos de educación cívica
